STEVENSON GIRLS TELL OF GRATITUDE OF JAPS

Royally Entertained American Physicians and Nurses.

SHOWERED WITH GIFTS

Some idea of the efforts of the people of Japan to show their appreciation of relief extended that country when it was visited by earthquakes costing thousands of lives and millions of dollars in damage to property, is given in a most interesting letter received a few days ago by George F. Stevenson, of Waddle, from his daughters, Misses Sarah and Betty, who are now in the Philippines. As is well known to our readers, the Stevenson girls are nurses in the United States Army and were members of the first government relief party hurried to Japan following the news of the great catastrophy in that far-distant land.

"The Republican" several weeks ago published a letter from the Misses Steveson describing their trip to Yokohama and the scenes of horror which greeted them upon their arrival there. The party of which they were members included army physicians, surgeons and nurses, equipped with supplies to establish relief hospitals. After the hospitals were established they were turned over to the Japanese.

It was when the emergency work of the American relief party had been finished and the members were ready to make their departure that the Japanese government officials and citizens made the visitors guests at most elaborate functions. Celebrations in their honor were held at a number of cities. Numerous dinners, theatre parties, sightseeing trips, etc., were held, with specially printed menus and programs. As the Misses Stevenson wrote home, the experience was one which they had never dreamed of being privileged to enjoy, and likewise one which they never will forget. Their letter telling something of this effort on the part of the Japanese to show their appreciation to the Americans was written on Oct. 22, last, while on the U. S. A. T. "Somme," enroute to Manilla. It follows:

"Dear Ones at Home—We are now on the last lap of the journey to Manila. In our last letter we left you in Yokohama Harbor. We went to Tokyo and erected a Field Hospital. During the time we lived in tents. It rained most of the time. We felt several slight earthquakes. Breakfast was at 5.30 A. M. We were packed in a small place, but we had a floor under us. At such a time there were, of course, no comforts. There were twelve American nurses and we were put in as supervisors in charge of the Filipino and Japanese nurses. The wards each had twenty cots and looked very nice. The operating room, etc., were fully equipped. On Saturday the hospital was finished and turned over for inspection. The Prince Regent was the first there, then a continuous flow of all the Japanese dignitaries, also quite a few Americans who are located here.

"Thursday afternoon the Red Cross sent cars and guides to take us for a ride through the city parks and Imperial gardens. Friday afternoon the nurses were invited to tea at the Peers Club. It is a beautiful place. We were guests of the Marchioness Nabeshima. Saturday at 3 o'clock the hospital was formally turned over to the Japanese. General McCoy made the presentation speech, and a Japanese minister of affairs accepted it. At 4 o'clock we left for Tokyo, where we had dinner and at six o'clock left on a special train for Yokohama. The Women's Alumnae Association and the Y. W. C. A. each sent us boquets of flowers. We left Yokohama Sunday at 5 A. M., arriving in Kobe on Monday at noon. Arrangements for our entertainment had already been made. Quite a delegation of women from the Patriotic Society were down to the dock to greet us. We were taken in cars through the city to the park and chrysanthemum show, then through some Baron's estate where we had tea, delicious sandwiches, ice cream and cake. Then for about an hour we were taken through the shopping district, and back to the Oriental Hotel for dinner.

"About half of the Japanese ladies spoke English, either having lived in the States, or attended college there. They presented us each with a silk parasol. (Betty's is lavendar, and mine old rose.) The ladies were the guests of the Governor's wife, and the officers of our party were guests of the Governor at a dinner party the same evening. By the way, one of the ladies who greeted us was a graduate nurse of the New York Hospital. She was dressed in the kimono, but she had her hospital pin in full view. She is married and has two children. One, a boy, is a student at Trinity College, in North Carolina.

"We returned to the boat about 11 P. M. There was a special schedule of entertainment for us for the next two days. There was a special train at the disposal of our party during all this time. The first day we went to Kyoto, where lunch was served in a long pavilion in the park. The day was delightful in every way After lunch they took us in cars out through the country to the river, then up the river in small boats to Hot Springs. The scenery was certainly beautiful. We had tea in the Mayor's garden, then left for Kobe and our boat. Lieut. McCartley of the Navy took us out to a Japanese dinner that night, which we enjoyed greatly.

"The next day we visited Nara. The deer park there is really beyond description. We were met at the station with rickshaws and taken to the deer park, where we had lunch at 12.40. They blow a bugle to call the deer for their food. There are more than eight hundred deer in the park, so you can imagine what a beautiful sight it was to us. The deer are considered sacred, so no one ever molests them, hence they are as tame as dogs. On our way through the streets we saw ten or twelve lepers. They were a pitiful sight.

"At four o'clock we left for Osaka. It is a large, thriving city, with many modern buildings. We were taken through the city in cars, down through the theatre street where cars are not allowed to go ordinarily, then through the Osaka Castle where persons may enter only with special permission. Afterwards there was a dance by girls from six to eight years of age. Each of us was presented with a sandalwood and lacquer fan. The next day we departed for Nagasaki, where we arrived at noon, and had the afternoon to ourselves for shopping. That evening the Governor and the Mayor entertained the American party at the Nagasaki Hotel. The American Consul, Mr. Hitchcock, and Mrs. Hitchcock, were there also. Each of the ladies was presented with a tortoise shell pendulum to hang about your neck. They are most beautiful.

"Thus we left Japan. Never have been before, and never expect to again, be entertained so royally. In every city they had a large American and Japanese flag in front of the public buildings. The streets were lined with people, cheering loudly. We looked to them just as queer as they looked to us. To all of us this will always be a memory of sickness, typhoons, ruins and hardships, but topped off with a very delightful time given by a people from whom we least expected it.

"Manilla is next, and we know not what."

TWO KILL SAME DEER

Squire Awards Each Hunter Half of Meat—New Point Raised.

Killing of the same deer by two hunters of different parties has raised several interesting questions. The deer was a legal kill but both hunters laid claim to it. They were granted a hearing before Frank A. Carson, justice at Potters Mills.

In the hearing, it developed that the deer had first been shot by a member of a Latrobe party, who motored to Centre County in a big auto truck and were using same as a camp on lands of Charles Neff, in Decker valley, a deer paradise in Centre County. It was claimed that the men in this party climbed into trees and shot deer that were raised by other parties, as the bucks passed near the trees where the hunters were concealed. A question has been raised as to whether this is good sportsmanship and fair to other hunters.

This particular member of the Latrobe party was in a tree about 200 yards from where Robert Dutrow, a son of Clyde Dutrow, of Centre Hall, was hunting. Mr. Dutrow said he shot the deer and killed it as it passed but it previously had been wounded. The Latrobe hunter said he fired the shot that had wounded the deer and that he had come down from the tree and was following it to get a fatal shot. Justice Carson thought of the widely known story of Solomon's judgment and ordered the men to divide the deer, each to take half.

Then another question was raised. Since both men had shot the deer and each had been awarded a part of it, would it be legal for either of them to kill another deer this season? The question was referred to James C. Furst, district attorney, who ruled as follows:

"Since both hunters have shot a deer, the only way in which either could be permitted to legally kill another would be if one or the other should completely withdraw the claim to any part of the deer."

The hunters abided by the decision of the justice and each retained his share of the deer.

BOOTLEGGERS ENCOUNTER ROUGH SAILING IN COURT

Prison Sentences for Several Violators of Liquor Laws.

MYERS FOUND GUILTY

Bootleggers had rough sailing before Judge Quigley in court this week. John Holderman pleaded guilty to illegal selling of liquor and was given three to six months in jail. Emro Pachepka and Casper Paulik pleaded guilty to manufacturing and selling liquor. Sentence 6 months to 1 year in jail and $500 fine.

W. E. Mosser, who sold his property nearby Penn's Cave and went to Canada after being raided for violating the Volstead law, changed his reported intention to remain away and forfeit his bail of $1,000. He returned, entered a plea of guilty and received a sentence of $500 fine and one to two years in jail.

Jeff Tierney, who with Fred (Gander) Myers, was arrested in Bellefonte by State police, went to trial on a bootlegging charge, but after some evidence had been offered he changed his plea to one of guilty. Sentenced to 1 to 2 years in jail, but paroled contingent on good behavior. Tierney has a large family.

Myers went through with his trial, only to have a verdict of guilty returned against him. Judge Quigley sentenced him to a fine of $500 and one to two years in jail. Judge Quigley scored Myers in passing sentence, saying to him:

"You have been an eye-sore to the community, not only in this, but in other matters. The Court has had a record of you for some time."

He admonished Myers to conduct himself differently when he gets out of jail.

The trial of Myers was the spectacular feature of the week, and the court room was crowded. The prosecution's testimony was exclusively by State policemen. They swore to buying a quart of liquor from Myers on the night of Oct. 11th, and proved that by chemical analysis that it contained nearly fifty percent. alcohol. A search of rooms occupied by a sister of Myers in the McClain block two days later produced a trifling quantity of whisky, which Myers claimed did not belong to him. Myers put up a well-corroborated alibi to the effect that he was in Unionville all of the evening of Oct. 11th, and did not return to Bellefonte until an hour or more after the time fixed by the State police relating to the purchase of the whisky. Edward Peters and his daughter corroborated Myers in this.

William Henshel, the State policeman who testified that he had purchased the quart from Myers, stated that he had paid $5 of the purchase money to Jeff Tierney, and $5 additional to Myers. The contention of the defense was that the liquor belonged to Tierney and not to Myers.

Henshel, while on the stand, denied taking two young girls, Leanore Holt and Louise McMullen, out with him in a car one evening and having whisky along. He also denied having been drunk during the period in question. Both girls swore that he had driven them to the Zion school-house, parking his car nearby the cemetery and producing a full quart and part of another quart of whisky. They also testified that he had taken several drinks while there. Leanore Holt swore that on the way back to Bellefonte Henshel was unable to steer the car very well, and that she had driven it some distance. She further swore that she had seen Henshel purchase one quart from Tierney and pay him a $5 bill.

Judge Quigley in charging the jury pointed out that the testimony was decidedly conflicting as to the whereabouts of Myers on the evening of Oct. 11th, and that both sides couldn't be right. He left it to the jury to decide. The jury returned a verdict of guilty.

John Kelley, said to hail from nearby Howard, guilty of stealing automobile tires from William Weber, was sentenced to one to two years in the penitentiary. Judge Quigley called Kelly's attention that the Court was aware of the fact that Kelly had frequently boasted of having "something on" Court House officials in bootlegging matters. Kelly denied this, but the Court was not impressed and he was sentenced severely.

Two cases in which Edward Chambers, of Snow Shoe, figured, did not go to trial. One was ignored by the Grand Jury. The other was settled out of court.

KILLING OF MOTHER FIRST HUNTING ACCIDENT

Mrs. David Custer, of Plum Grove Shot by Son.

OTHER HUNTING NOTES

With the hunting season in Centre County nearing what seemed a most successful end there came to blight the clean record a most unusual and very sad accident yesterday morning when Mrs. Lulu Conley Custer, wife of David Custer, of Plum Grove, was instantly killed by a bullet from the pump gun which a son, Harold, was carrying under his arm as he was starting out to hunt. The bullet entered the mother's left chest, near the heart, severing an artery. She died instantly.

The family moved to the Plum Grove region, which is near Wingate, about three years ago from the Pittsburgh district, where the deceased was born and resided most of her life. She was about 53 years old. Surviving are her husband; the following children: Mrs. Budd Monsel, of Bellefonte; Mrs. Joseph Davidson, of Wingate; Arthur, of Baltimore, Md.; Earl, Harold, Nellie, Paul and Clark, at home; one brother, Clark Conley, of Pittsburgh; one sister, Grace, married and residing in St. Louis, Mo., and one half-sister, Miss Mina Goheen, of Julian. Funeral services will be held from the home on Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock and burial made in the Stover cemetery.

It was stated in the community that the gun may have been defective, and that it had discharged prematurely for a previous owner, sending a bullet through the side of a house.

KILLED BY BLAST

Samuel Heverly, of Milesburg, Victim of Accident in Quarry.

Samuel Heverly, a well known resident of Milesburg, was instantly killed on last Thursday afternoon about 2 o'clock in the "mine" quarry of the American Lime & Stone Company. This is the first serious accident to be reported since the new method of quarrying was put into operation about two years ago.

Mr. Heverly was working on what is called the third "level," the shaft into the stone being about 400 feet in depth and divided into four "levels," so that he was deep in the "mine."

The method of blasting the stone was to prepare and set the required charges of dynamite, then leave the operation until time had been given for the charges to explode.

Three blasts had been put off about two weeks ago, according to information given out at the office of the American Lime and Stone Company, and three men were on the third level working on the stone that had been loosened. The work was just the same as followed in an open quarry. The men were Samuel Heverly, Samuel Mulbarger and Samuel Stanley. Mr. Heverly had just started to pick at the stone and it is supposed his pick struck the cap of one of the three blasts that, for some reason, had not discharged as it should have done and as the workmen were all of the opinion that it had.

Of course, there was a terrific explosion and Mr. Heverly's body was horribly mangled, cut in pieces and decapitated, but the other workmen fortunately escaped. It was such an accident as might have occurred in an open quarry and was not due to any defect in the mine operation. When a blast does not go as prepared, there is danger of a workman striking into the cap and causing an accident but it is a very rare occurrence in the method used by the American Lime & Stone Company workmen.

The deceased was born at Beech Creek, a son of Joseph and Susan Heverly. He was about 44 years old. He was married to Miss Dora Summers and they had resided in Milesburg since starting to housekeeping. He had been employed by the American Lime & stone Company for about two years and was known as an industrious and good workman.

Surviving are the widow; two brothers: Ellery, of Mill Hall; Clair, of N. J.; and two sisters: Mrs. Mary Bitner, of Beech Creek, and Mrs. Florence Bayard, of N. J. Funeral services were held on Sunday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock and burial made in Trexlyulny cemetery.

INJURED BY AUTO

Mrs. Mary K. McClure, of Bellefonte, is Recovering.

Mrs. Mary K. McClure, of Bellefonte, was very painfully bruised, but no bones were broken, when she was struck by a Ford auto at the Spring St. crossing on High St. on Friday morning, at 11 o'clock. The car was driven by Bernard Neff, of Bellefonte.

"Mrs. McClure stepped from behind another car directly in my path," said Neff "and I could not avoid striking her. I hope she is not seriously injured."

Several witnesses said Mr. Neff did not seem to have good brakes as Mrs. McClure was dragged on the front of the car for about 15 feet. The glass in the left front light was broken. Mr. Neff stopped his car and Mrs. McClure was taken to the nearby office of a physician, being removed to her home on West Bishop St. after her injuries were treated. Se is recovering nicely.

The injured woman is the widow of William McClure, in his lifetime a well known saddler. Owing to her advanced years, it is considered quite fortunate that she escaped with no broken bones. The auto was owned by Mr. Neff and was rebuilt by him in a type suggestive of cars used for cross country traveling.

PROPOSES $125,000 FOR FEDERAL BUILDING HERE

Congressman Swoope Introduces Bill for Bellefonte.

APPROVAL HOPED FOR

Congressman William I. Swoope, of Clearfield, who represents the congressional district of which Centre County is a part, has introduced a bill in Congress, at Washington, providing for the erection of a federal building in Bellefonte. The bill carries an initial appropriation of $125,000 for the purchase of a site and erection of the building.

Should Congress approve the measure, and such a building be erected, it would be devoted to use primarily as a post-office. Whether the new Congress will be disposed to approve very many public building measures at the present session is a matter of some doubt. If so, it is to be hoped that the bill favoring Bellefonte will be among the number approved. The bill, as introduced by Congressman Swoope, reads as follows:

"For the purchase of a site and the erection thereon of a public building at Bellefonte, Pennsylvania.

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized to purchase a site, or to acquire it by condemnation or otherwise, in the borough of Bellefonte, Pennsylvania, and cause to be erected thereon a suitable building, including fireproof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, and approaches, for the use and accommodation of the post office and other offices of the Government, the cost of said site and building, including said vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, and approaches, not to exceed $125,000 The said building shall be unexposed to danger from fire by an open space of at least 30 feet on all sides, including streets and alleys."

Auto Accident on Mountain Road.

A Ford touring car driven by Lawrence Runkle, of Centre Hall; crashed into a car driven by Harry Shutt, of Bellefonte, on the Nittany mountain road on the Centre Hall side on Friday evening. In the car with Mr. Runkle were Milford Luse, Harvey Marks, Samuel Gross and Howard Grove. The latter sustained two fractured ribs and Mr. Gross was painfully bruised, but the others of the party escaped injury. Mr. Shutt had two friends with him, but none were injured. The cars were considerably damaged.

Opens Service Station.

W. F. McCoy, for several years the live-wire foreman at the Beatty Motor Co., has embarked in business for himself. "Mac." has opened a modern service station in the Hiller property garage, at the rear of the Brockerhoff House. He will specialize in repairs for all makes of cars, assuring his patrons efficient and prompt service at all times. His father, who has been residing at Hackensack, N. J., will remove to Bellefonte and become associated with the new service station. "Mac" announces that all work at his service station will receive his personal attention.

Stolen Car Recovered.

While George Carpeneto, of Bellefonte, was watching the football game between Lock Haven High School and Harrisburg Tech, at Lock Haven, on Saturday afternoon, somebody stole his auto and went joy-riding. Mr. Carpeneto had left his keys in the car and it was an easy matter for the joy riders to get away with the auto. However, they ran out of gas when near Jersey Shore and abandoned the car, where it was found by Mr. Carpeneto.

Restrictions of Plebeians.

Roman commoners were called Plebeians and were originally forbidden all political rights. They were for the most part poor, and not allowed to intermarry with the Patricians. They served in the army without pay, were sold into slavery for debt, and could even be cut in pieces for distribution among their creditors. Finding their conditions intolerable, the Plebeians in 495 B. C. repaired to Mons Sacer, near Rome, where they resolved to build a new city; but this step so alarmed the privileged classes that they granted to the Plebeians the right of choosing annually from their own number two magistrates, called tribunes, with power to protect them against aggression of the Patricians. After the lapse of about 200 years the disabilities of the Plebeians were almost entirely removed.

Four-Word Speeches.

The talk at the London club had turned on the subject of theatrical first nights and the speeches at the fall of the curtain.

"I have had four plays produced," a playwright exclaimed, "and when I say authors should not make speeches I know what I am talking about. Town Gets "Stuck Up" After an Odd Accident

Morristown, O.—This town has been "all stuck up" as the result of an automobile accident. It happened after Emmet Rowley drove his wagon, on which he was hauling a barrel of sorghum molasses, into the path of a Pittsburgher's machine.

The automobile hit the wagon amidships, as the horse-drawn vehicle was driven onto Main street. The barrel of sorghum was tossed over the wagon rail and into the auto. The car, its occupants and the street were soon covered with the glue.

Spectators went to the aid of the automobile occupants and assisted them to a physician's office. The rescuers had difficulty in extricating themselves from the sorghum.

The real fun began, however, when efforts were made to move the wrecked automobile and wagon from the street. The sorghum by that time had covered the bricks and men staggered about as though drunk.

WAR AVIATOR KILLED AS HE GRASPS PROPELLER

French Veteran Attempts to Grab Blades When Plane Runs Amuck in Crowd.

Port Colden, N. J.—Marcel Ruellan, veteran of the French war-time flying service, gave up his life before a thousand spectators here recently in stopping an airplane that had made a landing and threatened to plunge into the crowd after the pilot had been tossed out. Realizing that a disaster was imminent, Ruellan sprang straight at the whirling propeller, grasped it with both hands and sought by main strength to still the engine. But the powerful blades sliced out of his grip and one smashed his skull. He died instantly.

A mechanic of long experience in the war and later a familiar of the flying fields around Mineola, L. I., Ruellan had only arrived here in the morning with two companions to give a series of passenger flights. Word that he had given up his life for others was sent to his sister, Mme. Jaffray at 532 West 111th street, New York. His former wife and a child live in France.

The Farman plane was brought to Port Colden, which is east of Phillipsburg and near Washington, N. J., by Marcel Mathias, understood to have been a French ace, his assistant pilot, Morris A. Devoe, and Ruellan. A big crowd had gathered when Mathias, who is said to have flown through the war without an accident, took off with two passengers, Oliver S. Moore of Portland, Pa., and Frank Felenzo of Port Colden.

They circled the Roseberry farm from which they ascended and then Mathias glided down in an easy landing. But something in the landing gear gave way and the plane dug its nose into the ground with a jolt that hurled Mathias out and jerked the passengers off their seats.

The engine kept going, and before Mathias, only shaken, could scramble to his feet, it had shaken its nose clear and started wabbling over the ground, while people milled helplessly, unable to gauge its careening path.

Mathias shouted to Ruellan to stop the engine and without a second's hesitation the mechanic leaped. Probably it was fear that the slightest delay would allow the craft time to gain dangerous momentum that led him to dive at her nose rather than run around, reach into the cockpit and close the throttle. An instant later the horrified spectators saw his mutilated body borne away. But he had retarded the runaway plane long enough for Mathias to shut off the power.

Indian Chief Slain After Squaw Swap

Prescott, Ariz.—A revival of the custom of trading in wives in the Purple mountain Indian camp, 87 miles south of here, led to the killing recently of an Indian chief by a brave who refused to turn over a shotgun demanded in the sale of a squaw.

The chief was Zookie Eams, and his slayer Otto Mokahque, according to authorities. Eams offered to sell his squaw to Mokahque, it was alleged, demanding one horse, one saddle and one shotgun in payment. When the squaw went to Mokahque the latter gave Eams the horse and saddle, but refused to part with the shotgun, the police said. A quarrel followed and Mokahque killed Eams, according to the authorities. Mokhaque was brought to Prescott.

Boars Leap to Death; Bodies Block Train

Paris.—The bodies of ten giant boars blocked the railway tracks of the Monte Carlo express near Marseilles.

During the night the boars climbed a cliff more than 300 feet high overlooking the tracks. The boar leader suddenly leaped from the cliff to death and then his nine faithful followers jumped after their chief.

Workmen cleared the tracks and later staged a barbecue.

274 NEW MEMBERS IN YEAR

Roy R. Volk, Adjutant Altus (Okla.) Legion Post, Adds Many New Names to Roster.

To Roy R. Volk, adjutant of the James Monroe Rosch post of the American Legion in Altus, Okla., is given credit for a remarkable growth of post membership.

When Volk was named to the post of adjutant the organization had but 18 members, but he increased this in less than a year to 292, making it one of the principal posts in the state.

The first thing Volk did was to secure one of the best-equipped clubrooms in the state, with a kitchen which would permit meals to be served to 300 at one time, a billiard room and a $1,500 library. Well-equipped offices and lounging rooms are to be found in the quarters.

In his drive for members Volk made a clean sweep of the city of Altus and extended his efforts to the surrounding country, visiting many ex-service men on nearby farms. He hopes to boost the post membership to 500 before the close of the year, and aspires to a home owned by the post.

Roy R. Volk.

Volk lost all his immediate family, two brothers and a sister, in the World war and is himself disabled. As sergeant in air service, he was cited for meritorious work while at Post field, no similar recognition having been granted a soldier at that post throughout the war, it is said.

FLAGS ARE IN SEALED CASES

World War Colors of Ohio Units Are Placed in Statehouse at Buckeye Capital.

Flags carried by Ohio units in the World war have been placed in a sealed glass case in the statehouse at Columbus, O., there to rest by the side of the colors carried by Ohio regiments in the Civil war.

The ceremony attending the return of the flags to the state, in accordance with a recent order of the War department, was attended by many veterans of both the Civil and World wars. Three national units of defense are represented by the World war flags now in the keeping of the state—the regular army, the National Guard and the reserve corps. In a parade prior to the placing of the flags in the statehouse many of the colors were carried by the original color sergeants who carried them in the World war.

The flags were presented by Col. Charles Rhodes, chief of staff, Fort Hayes, Fifth corps area commander, representing the United States government. They were received by Adjutant General Henderson of Ohio.

American Legion officials participated in the ceremony.

LEGION THEIR BEST FRIEND

Disabled American Veterans Express Confidence in Organization and Seek Its Help.

The American Legion is the best friend of the ex-service man, was the declaration of James A. McFarland of Dalton, Ga., national commander of the Disabled American Veterans of the World War, in an address delivered before the national convention of the Legion at San Francisco.

"The disabled American veterans realize that the best friend of the ex-service man is the American Legion," he said. "That the organization that has the strength to force the issue to demand the recognition due the ex-service men is the Legion, and I am sure my crippled buddies of the D. A. V. are glad that I rode 3,000 miles to let you men of the Legion know that we believe in you and want you to stand by us and help us."

Post Leases Auditorium.

The Lincoln (Neb.) post of the American Legion has leased the Lincoln City auditorium for a period of one year. The lease carries all contracts previously entered into by the city with individuals. The Legion post plans to use a part of the building for clubrooms. A canteen probably will be established in the auditorium.

TO AID ALL EX-SERVICE MEN

Outline of Year's Work Made Known in Resolutions Adopted at Legion Convention.

The policy of the American Legion for the coming year—which definitely means the policy of nearly 1,000,000 persons throughout the United States holding membership in the organization, and in reality represents the principles which will guide hundreds of thousands of unaffiliated ex-service men and women in this country for the same period, is embodied in the resolutions adopted at the recent national Legion convention in San Francisco.

These principles cover a variety of problems. The American Legion has taken a definite stand upon practically every question of national and international importance now before the people of the United States.

The most important of these is the question of rehabilitation, according to Legion leaders. The American Legion, at its national convention, adopted 91 resolutions embodying recommendations for governmental steps, legislative or otherwise, all insuring more complete justice to disabled service men at the hands of the United States Veterans' bureau. Although such a mass of suggestions for the improvement of the government's service to disabled ex-service men is proof that the bureau is not entirely as it should be, most of the resolutions call for legislative changes, and indicate no fault in the administration of the body. In fact, the convention expressed its appreciation of the way in which the bureau has been conducted by Director Frank T. Hines, who has served as head of the bureau since last March.

Outstanding among the resolutions offered under the head of rehabilitation are those continuing the work of the national rehabilitation committee of the Legion along the same broad lines as heretofore; recommendation that the federal law be amended to the end that no time limit prevent a veteran from receiving medical treatment or hospitalization for disability attributable to service; a suggestion that congress appropriate additional funds to permit improvement of the caliber and efficiency of the bureau; a request that nearly 5,000 beds be added to government hospitals to care for present and future needs, and a resolution instructing the national rehabilitation committee to survey all federal and state penal institutions and insane asylums to determine the number of ex-service men therein suffering from curable mental ailments caused by service.

The Legion for the fourth time reaffirmed its stand on adjusted compensation and demanded that congress pass the adjusted compensation bill without further equivocation or delay. The national Americanization commission of the Legion was authorized to establish a bureau of community welfare, work out a program whereby posts throughout the country can cooperate in movements for civic betterment, and urged that all posts devote their best efforts to the benefits of their local communities.

Specific details of the suggested program recommend the Legion work for the betterment of schools, recreation, park and playground facilities, furtherance of boy scout work and active participation in scout and troop organization and management; medical clinics, municipal music concerts, public forums, community buildings and city planning.

The fulfillment of the terms of the national defense act of June, 1920; the bringing of the navy's auxiliary strength to the standard required by our capital ship strength authorized under the 5-5-3 agreement and the development of aeronautics, especially a merchant air service, also was strongly advocated.

The American peace award plan was favored by another resolution, and the national commander was directed to appoint a permanent international peace committee to report at the next annual convention.

The Legion denounced as un-American any individual or organization which creates or fosters "radical, religious or class strife among our people, or which takes into its own hands the enforcement of law, determination of guilt or infliction of punishment."

The Legion again affirmed its policy in favor of suspension of all immigration for five years and stricter regulation in the absence of an exclusion law. Other resolutions, forming the keynote of the American Legion policy for the next year embodied the following points:

Indorsement of the maintenance of cordial relations with our allies in the World war and approval of the French policy in the occupation of the Ruhr;

Indorsement of land-reclamation projects, particularly those in the Colorado and Columbia river basins, which, it is pointed out, would make available hundreds of thousands of acres for soldier settlement;

Indorsement of a constitutional amendment empowering congress to enact legislation to prevent child labor;

Reaffirmation of the demand for a universal service law for the conscription on labor and capital as well as man-power in case of war;

A demand for the immediate passage of the Bursum bill, giving disabled emergency officers of the World war the retirement rights enjoyed by officers of the regular army, and

A declaration for the establishment in congress of a special committee to deal with all matters affecting the interests of World war veterans.

Used Medicine to Save Plants

Discovery That Aspirin Revives Flowers Draws Attention to Old Jap "Cures."

New York.—When a learned Frenchman recently announced that dosing with aspirin would revive wilting flowers modern science took another step forward and found itself at the beginning of a path which wise men in Japan have trodden smooth through centuries. The use of medicines for flowers, in a land where flowers are (perhaps were) as necessary as food, is almost as old as the art of flower arrangement—an art and philosophy in one, with its roots in religion and its blossoms in the world of such formalism as found expression in the tea ceremony.

The Japanese have their prescriptions for chrysanthemums at this season and that; they have other recipes for the lotus, for cherry blossoms, for the iris and for no end of flowers unknown to the West. One cannot approach the first Japanese one meets and receive them; indeed, for the most part they are unknown to the Japanese of today who sell flowers in America. These formulas are recondite; they are secrets passed from master to pupil, a bit at a time, and in this wise they have come down from a period in which men ran savage in America and Europe. Not unlikely among them are formulas which first came into use in the Seventh century, when the Ono family brought forth the first doctrine of flower arrangement and preservation. The latter aim, indeed, comes first, for arrangement is but a means; the end, in the origin, was to preserve buds and petals, according them the sanctity which Buddhism bestowed on animal life.

Took Years to Get Recipes.

On which flower, and at which season, should one use peppermint? Saltpetre? Honey? Sake? And how? Should the substance be sprinkled on the petal or injected in the stem? Should the stalk be burned or mashed, broken or cut, and what shape the slicing or incision, made with what knife or pair of scissors?

In other days men spent years learning the answers. There are schools of arrangement without end, each with its traditions and recipes; the student who has been with the master four years is told so much; another year, and further secrets are revealed. Thus year by year till the disciple in turn becomes a master and the last withheld lore is given to him.

True enough, Japan has come to a stage when it is thought of in terms of spindles and shipways, but the tradition persists, though it is weak, and bits of knowledge are now open to all which once would have been guarded to the death by a master. Much has been written for Caucasians about the art of flower arrangement—no Western posies as solid as cabbages but a pattern from a spray or two. There is little to be read, however, upon the preservative prescriptions. Yet they are not unknown even in New York.

Here, for instance, is Mrs. U. Okajima, who has lectured on her subject before Columbia university students.

"This way," she says, and in her Lexington avenue studio she improvises an arrangement of the simplest; one of the three points only—Heaven, earth and man. Sometimes there are five or seven, but always the elemental three are the basis of all the designs of stems and leaves and petals, whether they stand as they grow or are bent after being warmed or are held with wire. Long stalk or short, the picture must fall within a triangle.

"The flowers with strong stems last longer than the others, she explains. "Chrysanthemums keep three weeks in Japan, in winter."

Three times as long as here is the general rule. There is little steam heat in Japan.

"Bamboo and the pine are the hardest to shape. For the bamboo to keep alive it must breathe. You must make a little hole for air at each joint. Sometimes you blow water into these holes and sometimes you put sake in the water. Then there are flowers on which you must put salt. The wistaria is difficult. It will not grow in plain w[illegible] It takes much care. First you c[illegible] bottom of the stem." (She indicates a double incision like an X or a Y on the cross-section.)

"Then you put cotton in the cut and you burn the end of the stem. It is then put in water for three and a half hours. You take it out and put it in sake; you boil the sake with the flower in it, and when that is done, quick! into cold water." A gesture imitates the celerity of a blacksmith with a hot horseshoe. "Then you make the arrangement and when it is finished you put a little sake in the water. It is more beautiful if you do this at night." The purpose is to hold in the plant's vital juices and to help it to suck up water.

Sake, rice wine, is called for in many of the recipes. It is with no thought of a jest, however, that Riusaku Tsunoda says: "The Japanese divide men into the wet and the sweet, and it is the same with flowers. Most of the flowers in America are the kinds that prefer sugar."

Mr. Tsunoda, who is secretary of the Japanese association, points to a little book; a paper-covered volume scarcely bigger than a pocket notebook. Its title is "Ikebana Denju" (Secrets in Connection With the Arrangement of Flowers). It was published in 1919 and first sold at an exhibition of flower arrangement in Tokyo. "I have compared it with a written book made a hundred and fifty years ago," says Mr. Tsunoda, "and it is almost the same."

To Preserve Cherry Blossoms.

He goes on to explain the three stages of flower arrangement; first, the cutting, intricate in matters of length of stem, shape of cut and choice of implement; then the mid-period, during which the flowers must be kept in the shade, and finally the arrangement itself.

He turns to a formula for the preservation of cherry blossoms. There is a recipe for the single petal cherry; another for the double petal; that on the open page is the last. "Burn the end of the stem," it says, "and put powdered stalactite on the burned part." An old drug, Mr. Tsunoda explains. One found it in the old-time pharmacies. Perhaps in the beginning it came from some particular cavern where rock or water had a chemical virtue.

Another formula calls for potassium nitrate. Time was when potassium nitrate was not to be had in Japan; in those days they used boracic acid instead. There are ingredients unknown to America—mogusa, for one, a drug that looks like cotton and is applied to the skin when it is used medically and not for flowers. Or sansho, which is not a drug but a spice, a bit like pepper but sweetish and not so hot. And often the ingredients include honey and sugar. Travelers have written that the Japanese place some flowers in a strong solution of tea and pepper; perhaps their pepper is the sansho. Pepper is used, nevertheless; not ground, but whole. It is prescribed in one formula among those explained by another New York Japanese who has studied the art of flowers, Miss M. Tanaka, an American citizen who taught school in Hawaii for ten years and is now a student at Teachers' college.

Every Flower Treated Separately.

"It is the formula for the chrysanthemums of late fall: each kind of chrysanthemum is treated in a different way," she says. "For these, you must dissolve saltpetre in hot water. Let it cool before you put the flowers in. Then you make the arrangement, and after that is all done, put a peppercorn in the vase. Every flower is given its special treatment, according to different schools. Take just the flowers that you know in America. The peony withers easily; you must boil the end of the stalk after you have crushed it for an inch or so; then let it stand for a day in cold water before making the design. The snowball should be put first in hot and then in cold water and let stand three or four hours in the shade. The azalea needs lukewarm water. Some of them need salt water, such as the narcissus and the camelia. And others are partial to sugar, like the lily; you should burn the end of its stalk and put it in sugared water. There are chrysanthemums which require the same treatment; burn the stalk and then put in cold, sweet water for three hours before you handle them. Measure the sugar by bulk; one-tenth the bulk of the water.

Buds Treated With Honey.

"The lotus must be cut in the early morning. It is put in a pint of water to which sake has been added—one-tenth sake. Let this boil, then put the flower in cold water. When honey is called for, it must be mixed with warm water. The morning-glory has to be dipped first in boiling water and then in cold. The begonia is handled in a very different way; the ends of the stems must be wrapped in peppermint leaves. They are taken off when the flowers are arranged. There are ways to keep buds from opening. The plum, for instance, is treated with honey, white honey, which is boiled and allowed to cool. Then the buds are painted with it and they stay just as they were when picked."

Such a question as this is important when the skill, and even genius, of one of the most polite of arts is devoted to producing a composition which will be a thing of beauty in itself and still accord with a thousand formal rules. If this bit of color or that is given greater emphasis by the bursting of a bud, the arrangement is no longer what the artist created. The point is as essential as that other—if the flowers fade, the skill of the arranger is lost.

The summer is the time when preservatives are most commonly used. Indeed, the lover of flowers has his divisions of time—giyo is autumn and spring, winter is so and shin is summer, and by them he is ruled. Once the Japanese burned the ends of stems in charcoal; now they may use gas, but the effect is the same.

In hot weather the ends of stems are not infrequently wrapped in matting or bamboo husks or tissue paper—for five or six inches, if the stems are long, two or three if short—and the covering is tied on, according to Miss Mary Averill (Kwashinsai Kiyokumel), a New York woman who has written much about the art of arrangement.

NEW FRAUD LIKE PIRATES' TALES

Texan Offered Backers Wealth When He Found Bandits' Loot in Mexico.

GOLD CACHED IN CAVE

Fort Worth, Tex.—A story which rivals one of those famous pirate stories of Robert Louis Stevenson, and that story of adventure of the Count of Monte Cristo, is the one used by William G. Lambert of this city to defraud through misuse of the United States mails, according to a complaint filed in Federal District court here by United States Attorney Henry Zweifel.

The complaint charges that Lambert wrote letters to one H. L. Brown, residing in West Virginia, and various other persons throughout the country claiming to hold in his possession a secret source of information which would lead to the discovery of $5,000,000 in gold nuggets hidden in a cave in old Mexico which was placed there by two former members of Jesse James' gang who were fleeing from a gang of bandits.

It was further a part of Lambert's alleged scheme, the complaint said, to represent to the persons solicited that he was raising a fund for the purpose of recovering the treasure, guaranteeing that all who should aid him would be paid a 2,500 per cent dividend.

Text of Letters Sent to Victims.

Lambert's letter as set out in the complaint follows in part:

"October 6, 1923, to all who love adventure:

"And the pot of gold at the rainbow's end!"

"Now that Mexico has been officially recognized in full, the hazard has been reduced by half. It is so vastly different to anything you ever heard of before.

"The Ranch Was Raided."

Custer and, by the way, Lockwood is the only man who lives to tell us that General Custer was the first, not the last to fall in that historic massacre.

"Years ago there lived a man and his brother who were great admirers of the James boys. After the gang was rounded up, these young fellows found it wise to leave the country. They went to old Mexico and after some time married Indian girls. Years of successful trading made them immensely wealthy.

"From this point our story switches to the days of Villa and his gang. With his platform, he decided that the gringoes should give up their properties first. A few years later the ranch of friends was raided. The ranchmen were spared because it was generally known that they had traded trinkets for gold nuggets and had hidden them away.

Gold Nuggets Hidden in Cave.

"Having decided that Mexico was not the right place for them to be and having acquired this large fortune, the ranchmen packed up and started for the border. A long night's travel brought them forty miles from the ranch. At daybreak shots were heard in the distance. One brother engaged in a heated battle with bandits. Believing there was little hope for him to escape, he selected a cave and hid the gold. All were killed but one of the wives and three young daughters, who are still alive to verify this story.

"I am not much at letter writing, but I have told you my story as I best could. A little more money is needed to finance this party. I have arranged so that your efforts may be rewarded with stupendous returns if you choose to contribute and appoint me to represent you. I promise to do so to the best of my skill.

The letter was signed "Faithfully yours, William L. Lambert, attorney."

MOTHER AND CHILDREN HELPED BY HYPO-COD

Mother Rid Of Bad Cough And 12 Year Old Son Now Rugged and Strong.

If you are in ill health, or in a run-down condition there is no reason why you can't help yourself. All you have to do is to start taking Earle's Hypo-Cod the wonderful health builder according to directions, and take it until you are your real self again. You will find it pleasant and easy to take with none of the disagreeable taste of cod liver oil. This is what Mrs. William Snyder of 921 Carpenter Way, N. S., Pittsburg, writes about how Hypo-Cod helped her and built her children up into rugged healthy boys and girls: "After my last baby was born I did not regain my strength and I was nervous and had a heavy cough. One day I started taking Hypo-Cod and after taking a few bottles, my old appetite returned, my strength came back, my cough left me and I never felt better. My 12 year old boy was not well, had a little fever every night and could not sleep at night. He was very thin, had no appetite and cried a great deal. I gave him four bottles of Hypo-Cod and you would hardly know the child. He put on weight, sleeps fine, eats good and plays like a normal child. There is nothing like Hypo-Cod and I always keep it on hand." As a builder and system cleanser Hypo-Cod has no equal. It is carried and sold by all druggists.—Adv.

PRISON SHAPED LIKE EAR

Tyrant of Syracuse Constructed Cave So That He Could Hear Conversations of Suspects.

The Ear of Dionysius was the name given to a celebrated cavern near Syracuse in Sicily, said to have been constructed by Dionysius the Elder, tyrant of Syracuse, and used by him as a prison for suspected persons. This cave was 250 feet long and 80 feet high. It was fashioned in the shape of a human ear, and was so constructed that the faintest sounds were conveyed from all parts to a central chamber, corresponding to the tympanum or drum of the ear. There this tyrant secreted himself, sometimes, it is said, for days, and listened to the conversations of the unfortunates imprisoned within.

The workmen who built the dungeon were put to death to prevent them from divulging the use to which it was put. A whisper at one end could be distinctly heard at the other, by putting one's ear close to the rock, while the tearing of paper sounded like a series of explosions.—Detroit News.

MYSTERY DIAMOND IS SOLD

Stone Weighing 44 Carats Carried to England at Time of Bolshevik Revolt Changes Hands.

Carried to England from Russia at the time of the Bolshevist revolution the mystery diamond known as the "Princess Mary" has at last changed hands, the purchaser being a resident in the north of England. The price paid has not been divulged, but its late owner, Gordon Nathan, last year withdrew the diamond from auction, as the highest bid did not reach $10,000.

The diamond is a stone of yellow tint, with a Maltese cross on the back, and was named the "Princess Mary" because before her wedding a proposal was made to present the stone to her. It weighs 44 carats and is thus almost as large as the famous Hope diamond Mr. Nathan thinks the value of the stone will appreciate.

PAID COSTS OF OWN TRIAL

Kansas County, in Early Days, Levied on Property of Convicted Lawbreaker.

The first man hanged in Jackson county paid the costs of the trial in which he was found guilty. J. F. Buchanan, a conveyancer of Independence, recently dug out of his files a transcript of the records in the case.

Of course, Henry Garster, the first man hanged in the county, did not take the money out of his pocket, and the hanging was not delayed until he paid the costs. But the state got its money, and this is the way it happened.

Garster was hanged May 10, 1839, in Independence, having been found guilty of the murder of the husband of Rebecca Hawkins. In the indictment, Rebecca Hawkins was declared guilty of the murder of her husband as an accomplice of Garster, but the case against her was dropped. Pending trial Garster was released on a bond of $100.

The costs of the case were $138.27, and July 6, 1839, the court ordered execution and land belonging to Garster was sold to pay the costs involved in trying and hanging him.—Kansas City Star.

Watch Had Vicissitudes.

A Saskatchewan reader of the Montreal Family Herald says a young woman visitor lost her gold wrist watch on his farm last fall. One day while shoveling up some tailings the farmer found the watch. It is presumed that the young woman lost the watch in a wagon box of grain, and that it was shoveled into the granary, shoveled up again into a fanning mill, was fanned and dropped into the tailings where it was found. The watch is as good as ever.

...orts to Explain.

"A speech should be a ringing advocacy of some important principle."

"It can always be that," replied Senator Sorghum. "Every now and then a speech is bound to impress your public as merely an apology for the way you are going to vote."

OVER THE COUNTY

H. H. Royer and crew of men have finished for the winter their work on the state highway east and west of Millheim, putting it in shape for winter. Next spring it is planned to put on a good surface and make the highway a good one for tourists.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Lykens and daughter Grace were called from Millheim to their home in Philadelphia by a telephone summons which stated that the Lykens home had been robbed. The house has been burglarized before while the Lykens family was away and it is thought to be the work of some person familiar with the movements of the family.

William T. Hubler, who gathers cream for the Spring Mills creamery, now carries a rifle on his trips. The other day he saw a fine buck and a doe in a field west of Madisonburg. He also heard dogs bark and decided to prevent killing of the buck or doe, racing toward them and clapping his hands. Before they took away to the mountains, he was within 50 yards of the deer.

John H. Horner, of Tusseyville, has lost 2 cows recently from some mysterious malady.

Kesslers, of Millheim, where they conduct a large store, are considering the opening of a branch in State College.

Edward Riter, of Centre Hall, is engaged in drilling a well on the Lew Biddle farm, east of Bellefonte. The outfit is owned by Wayne Snyder, of Lewistown, who has another operation in Mifflin County. Shortage of water on farms has caused many farmers to dig wells,

The abandoned Presbyterian church property at Spring Mills has been purchased from the trustees by Harry Allison for $260. The pews sold at 40 cents each, the chairs at an average of 91 cents and all other equipment was sold at nominal prices. The purchaser of the church building is to have it moved from the premises within a period of 5 months. Mr. Allison plans to use the timber from the building in the construction of a new house.

Benore

The deer hunters hereabouts are not getting much game. Thus far, James Hilliard, of Coleville, with his two sons, have a 4-prong buck, which they killed on the opening day of the season. Another crew of Coleville hunters, numbering 10, camped in the Haugh house, but they soon became home sick and pulled stakes on Tuesday and Wednesday. A crew of 4 hunters are bunking at the Mattern bank farm, who stopping with P. B. Johnson, landed a fine 4-prong buck on Wednesday. They are Adam Spohm, A. E. Henry and Amandis Hoffer and his son, Earl, of Reading. Mr. Hoffer shot the buck. The Dixon crowd, of Port Matilda, got an 8-prong buck on the Scotia mud dam on Saturday.

The man who brings in the most game and has the best time, with lots of friends who visit him every evening at his camp at the old Abraham Hicks house, is John A. Snyder, of Spring Mills. He is kept busy lifting traps all day long and works at cleaning his fur hides at night until 9 and 10 o'clock. His record for November was: 108 skunks, 65 weasels, 8 raccoons, 13 opossums, 11 muskrats, besides a lot of mice and birds. Several times he came into camp with 11 skunks and 5 or 6 weasels. We haven't heard what his catch so far this month amounts to.

The deer in this section seemingly are pretty well acquainted with the law, for hunters see lots of does and very few bucks. The does know the law so well that they have become quite tame. One day recently Paul Ghaner was out with a crowd when he came across a doe and 2 fawn lying in the grass not 10 feet distant from where he was standing. To his surprise the doe made no effort to hurry away, so Paul called the others of his party. They came up and looked at the doe and her fawn for several minutes, and it was not until the men clapped their hands that the deer jumped up and ran away. There are many tracks of bucks, but the wily old buck apparently knows all about the law and keeps out of sight.

Court House Clerkships.

Register elect Harry A. Rossman stated yesterday that he had chosen Miss Geraldine Bilger as Deputy Register. Miss Bilger is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Barney Bilger, and has been serving capably as deputy for Register Sasserman for some time. Recorder-elect Lloyd A. Stover stated that he had selected his daughter, Miss Madeline Stover, as Deputy Recorder. County Treasurer-elect James O. Heverly has not made a definite selection of a Deputy Treasurer. Miss Verna Chambers, who has served very efficiently in that capacity for the last eight years, will continue with Mr. Heverly, at least until after the County Auditors have completed their examination of the county books. It is not known who will be named as clerks by the Democratic board of commissioners.

Has Classy Berkshires.

W. F. Rishel, of Centre Hall, was one of the Berkshire breeders who had two barrows in the carload prepared at State College for exhibition at the International Livestock Exposition in Chicago, Dec. 1—8, that won second place in their class. Mr. Rishel's hogs were outstanding individuals in the carload and, with one other from the Sycamore farms, placed second in the pen of barrows. The Rishel barrows placed second and seventh as individuals. As the International Livestock Exposition brings together the best in the United States and Canada, the winnings of Mr. Rishel's stock is most gratifying.

Telephone Operators at Altoona.

At a conference of Bell telephone operators in Altoona on Tuesday, directed by J. T. Harris, general traffic manager of the Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania with headquarters at Philadelphia, with the object of giving careful consideration to the increased traffic expected during the ensuing year, the following were present from Centre County: Bellefonte, Hilda L. Haupt; Centre Hall, Bessie M. Coldron; Philipsburg, Sarah Nolan; Millheim, Viola M. Boob; Spring Mills, Lydia C. Zeigler; State College, Viola R. Peters.

Saw a Good Game.

Quite a large number of folks from Centre County who went to Lock Haven on Saturday to witness the football game between the Lock Haven High School and Harrisburg Tech for state honors were pleased with the game put up by Lock Haven. While the score was 41—7, in favor of Harrisburg, the latter was known to have a stronger team from the start and the delightful part of the contest was the cleanness of the game and the splendid fight put up from beginning to end by the Lock Haven team.

HUNTING NOTES.

P. H. Powers, of the Keystone Power Corporation's officials, hunting with the Arthur Dale party in the Snow Shoe section, killed a bear that weighed 250 pounds.

Three does, illegally killed in the Seven mountains in the Centre—Huntingdon district, have been sent to the Altoona hospital. The does each weighed about 100 pounds dressed. It required 2 of the deer for one meal, the institution reported, as there are over 200 patients to feed.

One of the members of the Fisher hunting party, located in the Seven mountains beyond Boalsburg, caught a raccoon and it was caged and taken to the hunter's home when camp was broken this week, after 5 deer had been killed. The coon, safe in its cage, furnished much sport for the hunters.

A black bear weighing 200 pounds was shot at Wallace Run on Friday by Raymond Wagner and James Mallon, of East Liberty. The carcass, in transit to East Liberty, while on a truck at the Pennsy passenger station in Bellefonte on Saturday afternoon, attracted many to view it and one of the passengers said, "Just to think of fellows like that being loose in the woods hereabouts! Look at those teeth!"

A party of hunters from Pine Grove, in the southern part of the state, using tents for camp and pitched at Walter Gherrity's Place in the Seven mountains, lost about $300 on Saturday when fire from an overheated stove, burned the tents, and contents, including revolvers, clothing and $35 in cash, which one hunter had left in his clothes. The party was in the woods at the time, nobody but the camp cook being about.

William Hoover, Harry and Andrew Vaughn, all of Sandy Ridge, claim honors for killing the largest buck of the season, a deer with a spread of antlers having 18 points, shot in the region known as Summit, along the Tyrone & Clearfield branch of the P. R. R. It is the largest deer reported killed in the state. Hoover fired the shot that toppled the monarch of that section. The Cassanova club, in Rush Twp., killed a buck that weighed 210 pounds, while the Monarch club, in the same region, secured one weighing 200 pounds.

Many families listed as poor, aged persons or sick, received choice pieces of venison last Friday, the meat being distributed through the Elks charity committee and Mrs. M. E. Brouse by authority of the game commissioner granted after a request had been made by J. C. Furst Esq., who explained that local institutions had been supplied. The venison was the first tasted in many instances by some of our older residents, who have been in failing health, and were not forgotten and were cheered by the appetizing morsel.

Hunters who come to favorite grounds in the Seven mountains year after year should bear in mind that the territory is still open to others who observe the law This is mentioned because of a rumor that some day hunters were apparently given to understand that it was dangerous to hunt in certain places. The inference is that there are some hunters, who come here from other points, are becoming so accustomed to certain hunting fields that they would become imperial. It is averred that in one instance a day hunter was told that he might get shot if he went for deer in the territory adjacent to one of the camps. Such a statement, reported to proper authorities and supported by convincing evidence, might become a serious matter.

TWO ELECTROCUTED

One Cursed Continually Until Silenced by Current.

Two men—Angelo Fracassa and Antonio Daniele—convicted in Washington County of first degree murder paid the extreme penalty for crime on Monday morning when they were electrocuted for a murder they claimed to be the result of their connection with a Black Hand society.

Fracassa was 28 years old and his body was not claimed. He went to the chair at 7:07 and was pronounced dead at 7:13

Daniele went to the chair at 7:23 and was pronounced dead at 7:28. He cursed continually from the time he entered the solemn death chamber until his voice was silenced forever by the electric current. He was about 35 years old and is survived by a widow and several children. The body was claimed for burial.

There have been very few electrocutions since the new Board of Pardons was sworn into duty. Many convicted of murder have had their sentences commuted. There was an electrocution in May and one in July, the last electrocutions this year until this week. This is in striking contrast to the schedule which had previously claimed one, sometimes several lives, almost every Monday morning at Rockview.

Killed "King of the Range."

The "King of the Range," known in the Hazleton district as the largest buck in the woods and one of the finest specimens of deer in the state, was shot and killed last Thursday by Dr. Ira Freyman, of Weatherly. Dr. Freyman's wife was with him when the buck was killed. Many particular hunters have stalked the deer in vain for a decade, it is said by residents of the district, and failed to get a fatal shot. The buck weighed 156 pounds and had a rack of 12 antlers, with the horns cut and gashed from the many battles with other bucks which disputed the title, "King of the Range."

Announce Engagement.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Brooks, of Clarence, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Minnie, to Samuel Wilenzik, formerly of Altoona but now of Lewistown, where he is manager of the Conroth store.

The home is called the Crawford shops and is maintained by the Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor.

The Christmas Dream That Came True

Her "Sunshine Factory" Gifts

By MARTHA B. THOMAS

Generous Woman Operated "Plant" From Which Presents Were Distributed

Every Christmas Package Had Something That Somebody Wanted

SOME people considered Miss Tilly a queer old maid. But those people were too blind and stupid to care really what she was. Other people looked upon her as a fat, funny spinster who had curious ideas. These people were tolerant but uninterested. But still others knew Miss Tilly for what she was, and these were rewarded by a glimpse into her "sunshine factory."

Miss Tilly was comfortably situated and had a "neat, tidy income." She never had to worry about the gas bill or the butcher's bill or the coal in the cellar. But let it be said at once that she worried about other people's bills and found many quiet opportunities to help them out, that is—the bills and the people.

It was a source of great bewilderment how much Miss Tilly knew about other folks' affairs. Not in a prying, inquisitive way, but in a generous, smiling one. It seemed as though she made a point of learning about all those who needed a bit of encouragement or help. And all this interest on Miss Tilly's part served as the foundation of the "sunshine factory."

Take that blustering, bleak afternoon two days before Christmas, when Mrs. Billings fairly blew into Miss Tilly's front hall. Her arms were full of bundles; she was breathless with struggling against the wind, and she was wiping away the half-dozen tears from her cheeks.

Miss Tilly bustled out, took all the bundles and escorted Mrs. Billings to a chair near the fire.

"Now, do tell me all about everything," smiled the hostess, "as soon as you get your breath. I'm eager to know if you found out exactly what Pa Saunders wanted most, and if Miss Susie needed some overshoes, as I thought, and how many children loved candy canes better than oranges, and—"

Mrs. Billings smoothed out her skirts, folded her hands in her lap, cleared her throat and said: "Miss Tilly, if half the people in this town knew how good you were, they'd feel pretty small and mean. There isn't a person who looks after folks the way you do, and you won't let me say a single word about it."

Miss Tilly laughed. "What's the use? I get a lot of fun out of discovering what people need and then sending it to them. I feel like Santa's second cousin. Now, tell me about everybody."

"Well," began Mrs. Billings, "Pa Saunders said that of all things he'd like best was one of those little bulbs of Japanese lilies. Isn't that just like him? He needs wood for his stove, but he said he always hankered after seeing one of those bulbs grow, so I got half a dozen and a jar filled with pebbles."

"Yes," said Miss Tilly, "I'm glad he likes the lilies. We'll send some wood, too."

"And Miss Susie looked a little wistful and said she wanted some of those new fashionable boots with big tops and wrinkles at the heel!"

"Oh, dear Miss Susie!" laughed Miss Tilly again, "how absurd and lovable she is!"

"So I bought a black pair with astrakhan around the tops, or imitation. And all the children I spoke to wanted oranges and candy canes, so I've had five dozen of each sent up here. I selected ten wreaths from the little girl who isn't very well and makes them to help her mother earn money, and I bought half a dozen books for the folks who can't get about much."

Miss Tilly beamed. "Now, let's take them into the 'sunshine factory' and do them up, or at least those things you've brought with you."

She led Mrs. Billings to a large room on the second floor. This room had no furniture but long tables and a chair or two. Over the door was tacked a small sign: "Sunshine Factory" was printed on it. Evidently the sunshine was the important part, for it was printed in larger letters.

Here were piled great heaps of Christmas presents, wrapped and tied and tagged. And every gift was something that somebody wanted more than anything else, for Mrs. Billings acted as a clever spy; it was her business to discover what people wanted. Miss Tilly was the general to whom she reported.

"I've hired two boys," remarked this rosy general, "to take the gifts around Christmas eve. And I've pasted a tiny label on each present—'From the "Sunshine Factory."' Here's one that gave me the most pleasure of all. You must never, never tell."

Miss Tilly opened a small, gray velvet box; sparkling on blue satin was a small diamond ring. "This is for Billy Saunders. He's the best lad in town and is in love with that pretty Molly Sherwood. He wants to marry her, and can in a couple of years, but he doesn't dare ask her because he can't afford an engagement ring just now. I can't bear to see them unhappy. Youth should be glorious with dreams. I've known him ever since he stole apples out of my orchard, bless him! This gift I'll take myself, or he'd never accept it."

Mrs. Billings planted a warm, resounding kiss upon the flushed cheeks of Miss Tilly.

"I shall burst trying to keep these things to myself, but I promise not to tell. You are the best woman that ever lived, and the only one who owns a 'Sunshine factory.' You bring happiness to the whole town and then pretend to be surprised when the people tell you about the mysterious presents they receive. Some day I shall pin a sign on your back."

"What sign?"

"Ask and ye shall receive!"

"Pshaw!" said Miss Tilly, but her eyes were very bright.

JOHNNIE rises long 'fore day—

"Boy we all admire."

Never doin' things that's wrong,
Far from duty strayin';
Helps his mother right along—
Never catch him playin'!

"Not another boy like John!"
Proudly says his mother:
"Dunno how the world moves on,
Since they ain't no other!"

"Why is it Johnnie's workin' so?"
The eager children cry:
"Well, Christmas ain't far off, you know—
You'll find out by an' by!"

BOLD AND DASHING

By LOUISE M. ADDLESON

(©, 1923, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

PROFESSOR Jordan, walking one pleasant afternoon to the home of Miss Ellen Ramsay, made a resolution the sum and substance of which was that he would be no more a shy, silent man, but a bold, dashing fellow, like his friend, Eric Wellfleet, whom, he imagined, Miss Ramsay admired.

Having made up his mind, the professor dropped into a confectioner's shop, where he purchased a five-pound box of candy of a brilliant red color. Girls like candy, and gay, dashing fellows were always buying it for them. Professor Jordan was sure that Ellen would be delighted with his gift, to which he added, from a florist's shop across the way, a few exquisite roses that exactly matched the candy in color. They were expensive, but to a bold, dashing fellow expense was a mere trifle.

Very bold and very dashing indeed did the professor appear when Ellen, with a brilliant smile, opened the door for him.

"So glad to see you," she said. "Mother's lying down with a headache, and I'm feeling rather dull—dying of loneliness, in fact."

In the professor's judgment Ellen didn't look as if she was dying of anything. Her color was high, her eyes shining. She was prettier than he had ever seen her before, so pretty that he forgot he was a bold, dashing fellow, and became his usual shy, awkward self. Instead of offering the roses with the nonchalance of a Don Juan, he put the flowers carefully on a chair, and as carefully sat down on them. The box of candy he held tightly clasped under his arm.

Ellen looked a little puzzled as she offered him tea.

"How—how is your book getting along?" she asked.

"Splendidly. That is—not so good." The professor reflected. He was not even distantly approaching the standard he had set himself. He reminded himself that he had a role to play; that he was a bold, dashing fellow, and he mustn't sit and stare like an idiot. An inspiration came to him.

"You—you are very beautiful," he said.

Ellen showed surprise, and the bold, dashing fellow blushed, uncomfortably. Women were disconcerting creatures—and there was something wrong with his chair. He rose and picked up the once fresh and lovely flowers, most of them beheaded.

"So—so—sorry," he said. "I bought those roses for you, but I guess—I guess they're not much good now."

"Poor flowers!" said Ellen. "I'll put them in water, anyhow. Maybe they'll revive."

The bold, dashing fellow bethought himself of his other gift. "This," said he, taking the five-pound box from under his arm, "is candy. I hope you will enjoy it."

Ellen's eyes bulged as she opened the box. "Strawberry drops! I used to love them as a child. It's awfully good of you, but—but there are quite a lot of them, aren't there?"

"I intended that you should have a lot of them," said the professor, grandly. He had somewhat recovered his composure. Certainly women were disconcerting creatures, but a bold, dashing fellow could always handle them.

Ellen looked a trifle uneasy. "Will you—will you have some more tea?" she asked.

"I will. Tea from you is like—like a cocktail—from another."

It wasn't at all what he had intended saying. Cocktails and the professor were not even distantly related, but, though unpremeditated, he felt that the speech fitted his role nicely.

Ellen silently refilled his cup, and set it before him. The professor, without noticing her perturbation, and more and more pleased with himself in the role of Don Juan, grasped her hand. Ellen, in growing confusion, withdrew it too quickly. The cup turned over, the hot tea splashing her fingers, and, to the professor's consternation, she began to cry.

Gone was Don Juan, gone the bold, dashing fellow. A young and horror-stricken Professor Jordan stood before Ellen, a professor the picture of abject, miserable guilt.

"Please—please," he pleaded, when he found his voice, "don't cry. I'm a fool, a brute, a donkey, a criminal! I'm everything that is low and vulgar and detestable! And I'll never, never forgive myself! Let me get you an unguent. You must be suffering horribly."

"It—it isn't the burn that hurts. It's—it's you. You—you put on the cloak of a Lothario—and—and—it doesn't fit you. You're—you're so much nicer as your plain, honest self. I—I don't know what to make of you this afternoon."

The professor's face flushed a deeper crimson. "Forgive me, Ellen. I was trying to imitate Eric Wellfleet. I thought you liked him, and—"

Ellen laughed hysterically. "I cordially and heartily dislike him, because he is a conceited, empty-headed prattler who thinks he's a lady-killer. If he were the last man on earth I could never care for him."

"Forgive me," repeated the professor, and suddenly found himself on his knees. "Ellen, do you think you could stand the love of a shy, stupid man—if he promised to be himself—ever after?"

"Why—why—if you mean yourself, you may be shy—but never stupid," she whispered, close to his ear.
